

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.

P.S. Even though the above words were not written by me I feel no need to change them because they so clearly and completely express my thoughts on this situation. It is deeply concerning to me that Sinclair is forcing its stations to pre-empt regular programming for this reason. I want the FCC to know that this message from me is no quick click of a mouse. Thank you.
